MISS ROACH

During my last months at school, I have been frequently asked if I will miss Branksome. I suppose I shall but, to be honest, looking back has never been part of my makeup. Rather, I leave with more positive feelings - an enthusiasm for the next part of my life and feelings of admiration and gratitude for what I have experienced during those short, packed nineteen years.

The core of Branksome is you, the students, and it is you who have given me the most pleasure. This is absolutely true! Who could not admire your health and energy and love of fun. I love the way you can, without malice, make fun of what is ridiculous in yourselves, the school and even in me. I love the informal, friendly and respectful way you treat your teachers and I admire how much most of you care about your academic work. Because of this care, you are a pleasure to teach. I admire the confident way you can stand up before others and speak, far advanced from what I was at your age. I love the way you comfort one another in times of difficulty and there have been too many times for grief in the last few years. I'm proud of the letters and phone calls I receive about your kindness to an elderly woman who falls on the street or your expert help at the Children's Aid Christmas party. I love the sincere concern many of you have for your environment and for the less fortunate people in Toronto and the quick way you respond to their needs. I admire the courage some of you have to speak in assembly against all forms of injustice and I admire the fact that in nineteen years I have never heard you criticize another school.

I have often watched you at play and admire the obvious respect one team player shows for another and for the opposing team. I admire too, that, for you, a good game is as important as winning. The purity and beauty of your sound when you are singing intoxicates me. I admire your readiness to try something different, a new interest group or activity, and, when it works, how quickly you absorb it into the Branksome tradition. And I love your fervent protection of those things which you consider sacred. You are funny, spontaneous, complicated, sometimes difficult but always alive, always interesting. Thank you.

Throughout my years at Branksome, I have learned a great deal. Today I would like to share with you my ideas for making your year at Branksome enjoyable, meaningful and successful.

We go to school to learn, girls, what we never never knew I before E except after c. Why two plus two makes four.

I would like you all to know that the teachers are here to teach us children well. To teach much more than words, words, words. To teach so we can know and understand. For this reason, I encourage each and everyone of you to go knock knock knocking on your teachers door whenever you have any questions so at the end of the year you can firmly say that you know so much about history; know so much about biology; know so much about science books; know so much about the French you took.

As I have mentioned before, the prefects, all fifteen of us, are here for you. To answer questions, to take suggestions, to talk to you, to listen to you. Just call on us sisters when you need a hand. We all need somebody to lean on. You just might have a problem that we'll understand.

Branksome is not just a place to study. Take my hand, come with me where the children are free. Come with me, take my hand and we will run and we will sing and we will debate and we will write and we will plant and we will plan and we will improve.

Activities are the stuff that dreams are made of when you leave Branksome Hall, you do not want to have lingering regrets for the song you never sang, for the race you never ran, for the goal you never scored, for the debate you never fought, for the role you never played and for the club you never joined. This is your chance. Come get involved, come meet new friends. There is something for everyone at Branksome Hall.

We have to remember that we are not only students of a wonderful school, but also citizens of an often complicated world.

As young fortunate members of our society, we have a lot to offer to our city, to our country and to our world. Our involvement as volunteers, sponsors and supporters in organizations and causes that we believe in, makes all the difference we could make if every Branksomite would volunteer in some way this year!

I have always firmly felt that people should be treated equally - female or male, black or white, Christian or Muslim, homosexual or heterosexual, handicapped or non-handicapped. As educated girls and women, we must defend people who are treated unfairly or who are unjustly criticized.

It is important that we say what we feel. It is important that we know what we believe and that we are willing to stand up for it. It is also essential that we broaden our lives and help enrich the lives of others. I can guarantee that if you give your time to others in need, your own life will in turn be that much more fulfilled.

KEEP WELL THE ROAD.

Branksome, thank-you for everything you have given me.

RETIREMENTS . . .

MISS ALLISON ROACH

Branksome's pride and delight in the 1974 appointment of Allison Roach was, in part, based on her being the first alumna of the school to hold the position of principal. The ongoing years have more than justified the high expectations felt in 1974.

While valuing what was best of the school's traditions, Miss Roach has always been an innovative and forward-looking principal. Never one to accept the status quo automatically, she has made changes and additions to the school's programme and her years as principal have seen significant improvements to the physical plant. The curriculum has been enhanced by the addition of the Extended French programme, instrumental music, computer science, the expansion of physical education and drama, and exchanges to foreign countries. The school has benefitted from the monumental restoration and reconstruction of Main House in the late '70s, the building of a new science wing in 1983 and, most recently, the new senior school gym and the junior school building.

When one thinks of Allison Roach personally, one thinks of her absolute integrity and forthrightness; her imagination and enthusiasm; her marvellous sense of humour (essential to the job); and, perhaps most, her good judgement and overriding wisdom. She is always quick to sift through other matters in order to deal with the essential concerns. Allison Roach is a 'principal from all points' who knows her school first-hand; and the atmosphere of the school, so often cited as warm, welcoming and unpretentious, reflects her being, and her joy at the undertaking!

Past and present students will remember Miss Roach's awareness of them as individuals; her regular support shown in turning up at functions away from school, such as rowing and debating, when they were involved; her classic roles in Christmas skits; and her denial of the possibility of 'snow days'. The mother of one student said that her daughter automatically pulled up her socks when passing Miss Roach's portrait in the hallway! But most important, they will remember her urging them to strive for what seemed impossible for them, be it the descant in 'The Lord is My Shepherd' or a higher level of achievement in their individual endeavours.

To say that Allison Roach will be very much missed is colossal understatement, but she herself, typically, would urge us all, girls, staff and alumnae, to set our sights on and direct our energies to continuing excellence for the school as we welcome her successor to the Branksome community.

Susan Kenny

An Open Letter From Mrs. McRae Upon Her Retirement

It was September, 1968, when I came to Branksome Hall, little imagining that I would stay for 25 years. I began by teaching Modern History in a basement classroom and first year Latin in the Mews where the Senior Gym now is. I also taught English in a classroom in Buccleuch for many years. I have not always been in that dangerous chair in Room 2. (1) Neither the room nor the chair was in existence until 1971. When I arrived Debating was made my responsibility. There was a wonderful team already in place and the boys' schools, especially Ridley, were beginning to worry. In those days the boys thought all they had to do was to pose with their thumbs under the lapels of their three piece suits. Mrs. Zommers joined me in the debating business in 1974 and Branksome's reputation for running enormous, efficient tournaments rose to great heights. After I retired from debating five years ago I became Staff Advisor to the Kilt Press. I suppose I should not confess right here that I dreamed up that name in response to a competition and won it.

Back to 1968. I was put in charge of the pageant in the Carol Service and have been looking for angels and other characters ever since. Somehow or other, very early in my Branksome career, it became my job to stand at the entrance to St. Paul's Church to control the crowds of parents and guests. In June, 1974, I tried to refuse entry to the reserved seats to a lady who finally had to tell me that she was the new principal of Branksome.

It is also true that on one occasion I did say to a class "Your ignorance is nothing to celebrate." (2) It is NOT true that I ever appeared on the cover of Vogue magazine. My modeling career was short lived (one week) in London, England where I was working on a magazine on the other end of the scale. A distinguished photographer did ask to do my portrait in middle age. (3) That my hair is really long is demonstrated in a Grub Day picture of 1977. (4) I regret that no picture exists of my favourite stage role as Tweedledum to Mrs. Watson's Tweedledee, but we can be seen working together in 1992. (5)

I have not lived only for Branksome. I am a wife, a mother of three, a grandmother of three. Any time -- long weekend, Christmas, March Break and summer --- I am at the airport as soon as I am free. I have lived long periods in England, France, on Greek islands and in Sicily. I have visited every country in continental Europe at least once. There was a marvellous Branksome trip one March Break to Jordan, Israel and Egypt which filled us all with wonders of the world from Petra to the pyramids. One year I was away with my husband on leave of absence living in the mountains in Austria, in the middle of Florence and in a paradise in Sicily which we revisit almost every year. The most unusual journey was in Canada, taking a supply boat to the communities on the Labrador coast, heading straight into the Northern Lights. Davis Inlet disturbed me indelibly a decade ago. My wanderlust began 45 years ago with Mexico and Guatemala. It is unlikely that you will ever travel across the seas in ocean liners as I used to do or find yourself somewhere tourism has not yet reached, but keep your eyes and mind open to all the world.

Among my colleagues at Branksome I have found a great many friends for life, some from the very first year of teaching. They have been my other family --- along with all the students I have worked with. Strictly speaking, in 24 years, at about 75 new names a year, I have probably worked with 1800 Branksome girls. My computer capacity to produce names on sight is exhausted. So please, when you run into me on the street or in an airport, in Paris, London or Toronto, tell me your name. I'll remember your face or your voice or something else wonderful about you and be overjoyed to see you again as I was in '86 to see some of a class of '71. (6)

The most unforgettable student I ever had was a bom comedian who completely distracted every class she was in. At last I found a way to counteract her effect. I made her stand in the corner behind me so that the rest of the class had to look at me to see her. She now writes comedy professionally in Hollywood as her last communique informed me. Dear Marjorie!

I don't know how many times I have taught MACBETH or HAMLET or TO HIS COY MISTRESS, every time finding something more in them. I have cared passionately about words --- spoken, written, read -- in prose, in poetry, in formal speeches, in class. I hope some of that passion has touched some of you. Read to your children!

With great affection,

Nora McRae

MISS KAWANO

Branksome is losing one of its special people this June in the retirement of Miss Reiko Kawano. Miss Kawano, born in Saito City, Japan, came to Canada in 1966 and has been dietitian in charge of Branksome's kitchen for 21 years.

Miss Kawano is a tiny, dainty, quick moving, lovely looking woman who dresses in dramatic colours in the height of fashion and looks at least 20 years too young to retire. She has been responsible for all residence meals and many other school functions, often several in one day. Nothing has ever been too difficult for her. Last minute requests even during the busiest of times have been met graciously and cheerfully.

Students will best remember her special dinners at Thanksgiving, Hallowe'en and Christmas. What the staff will remember her most for is the exotic, oriental feasts she has provided for Branksome's many parties - the shrimp, shish kebob, sweet and sour dishes, all most beautifully presented.

Miss Kawano has been a great friend to Branksome, giving hours of her free time to the school and asking nothing in return. She has many friends on staff but none so close as those who have enjoyed working for her. It has been a pleasure for me to know this generous woman of fine taste and grace. All who know her will join me in wishing her a happy retirement.

GREG BUTEAU

Greg Buteau is retiring this year as the school maintenance supervisor. When the new science wing was constructed, Greg was the foreman of the brick laying crew. His work performance in that position was very impressive so he was asked to join the Branksome staff. Since February 1, 1985, Greg has approached his position with determination, dedication and a readiness to respond to all of our sometimes crazy requests with understanding. Thank you so much, Greg, and good luck in the future.

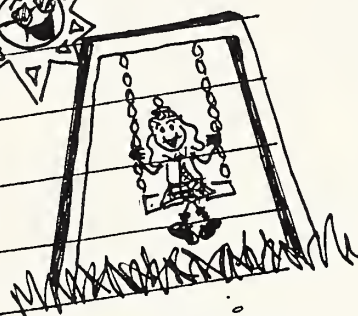

SUE WORSLEY

Sue Worsley has been a member of the Branksome Hall kindergarten team for eleven years. She has a spirit and a sparkle that has enlightened and enlivened the lives of her many young students throughout her years at Branksome. Sue has spread much joy to those she taught, her dedication, great love for children, sense of humour and professional excellence have all contributed to making the kindergarten a magical and special place. Mrs. Worsley will be greatly missed and fondly remembered.

MRS. PENNY

The Junior School continues to grow and its students to blossom. Even as I write, on one of February's coldest and snowiest days, I am aware that Branksome is a place where everyone can push upward, expand and open to the warm sunlight of new learning. I see kindergarten students recognizing numerals, letters and words as they sit at the computer terminal. I see primary children reading aloud to a partner, analyzing the spherical properties of bubbles or wondering how Helen Keller could perceive the feelings of others. I see Grade 4 girls converting fractions to decimals, Grade 5 girls mapping Canada's irregular coastline and Grade 6 girls participating in an archaeological dig. I hear Romeo and Juliet being enacted, watch the perfection of synchro moves in the pool, and observe students as they puzzle over taxonomic analysis of living things. I listen as they debate the justice of employment equity. I overhear one girl explaining the calculation of percentage to another.

Behind all this growth are the quiet steady efforts of many. To all the teachers for their constant care, my thanks. To our big sisters, Hilary Burt, Lynne Bradley and Kate Manson-Smith, to all their fellow prefects, to Kerri Maxwell, to Ms. Popper's Grade 10 French students a hearty thanks for showing us what we can become. To Miss Brough for her unfailing loyalty to every child's welfare, thank you. Thanks to the office staff and to all those who support the teaching and learning process.

And on behalf of everyone on the West Side I express my own deep gratitude for Miss Roach's leadership. She has never stopped learning and growing and never will, I believe. As these pages demonstrate, she is like Miss Rumphius, who planted lupin seeds in every garden or meadow she passed. For she leaves Branksome a more beautiful place than she found it.

MY PET MONSTER

My monster is very hairy,
I cuddle with him at night.
He eats pillow cases so I can't put a case on my pillow or he'll eat it, but we feed him my grandmother's old pillow case.
He has eight arms like an octopus, he is all green except for his nose and toenails, they are black.
His favorite game is hide and seek. He is friendly to me, he can't read so I read stories to him.
He loves pillow fights but without pillow cases. His name is Fennel.

MY MONSTER

My monster lives in my attic. She is sort of like a ghost. Her name is Jenna. She only eats the things that I sneak from the kitchen, like cookies. She comes to play at night when everyone is sleeping. I cannot show her to anyone. My mom and dad do not know about my monster.

 Only you now that no matter how hard you try,
 "Oh, please not a test. I'm going to die!"

MY FATHER CAME TO SEE ME

The night was cold and dark and I couldn't see any light up in the distance. I walked all night until I saw someone with a candle saying, "Grace. Grace. come here. I want to help you find your way home." I thought I had seen him before. I got closer and closer and then I saw that he was my father, but my father had died when I was four years old. He said that he came to see me last night but he could not find me, so he came again tonight and he found me.

NIGHT WALK AT ALBION

In the dark and mystic night,
I had a terrible fright,
When our only source of light
was the stars that twinkled bright.
The coyote call was fun,
but Nancy the moose was rather dumb.
We tried to call an owl,
but we didn't hear a sound.
I was the very first brave soul
To walk along the pitch black ground.
But when I crawled into my bed,
When my feet were almost dead,
I thought of all the scary fun,
We had when there was no more sun.

I lie silently
In my soft fur bed
While the fire flickers
And dances and cackles
To the clear soft sound
Of a bone flute
As a man
Who was born
Many moons ago
Tells of the spirit
He met
He wore the mask
With a face twisted
Strangely
And the smoke
Seems to act out
The story.

EXCEPT ME

There is a man I know who lives all alone
He has no friends at all
Nobody thinks or cares about him
Nobody except me.

He lives in a shack on top of a hill
With a chair on the bare floor
Nobody ever wonders about him
Nobody except me.

Every morning he comes out to his rotting porch
And sits there all day looking down at us
But nobody bothers to return his peaceful nod
Nobody except me.

If they did, they would notice his kind face
His aging wrinkles and his toothless smile
I feel sorry for that man on the top of the hill
Only me.

A NIGHT AT NORVAL

Twas the night after Norval, the lights were unlit
 The room was as dark as a very deep pit
 The grade 7 students were snug in their beds
 While visions of tight-rope walking danced in their heads
 But one little girl, she was not asleep
 She was tossing and turning and trying to speak
 A bang on the floor made her sit up in bed
 But she sat up too fast and "ouch" went her head!
 An arm from a bunkmate came out in surprise
 And knocked her back down so she slept to sunrise
 Early next morning with a quite heavy head
 She listened to what people thought she had said
 But from that day on she did not talk in bed
 She decided to snore rather loudly instead!

Branksome Jingle Bells

Jingle bells, jingle bells
Branksome is the best.
We come to school and learn things too,
We meet new friends and win.
Yeah!
Jingle bells, jingle bells
Branksome rules all schools.
We have spirit and we have guts,
and a carol service too.

Climbing through the snow on a very cold day to get to our school where we learn and play.
Ha Ha Ha!
We like all our teachers and our principal too so come to Branksome Hall and we'll have fun with you.

The 1992 track and field season brought outstanding success to Branksome Hall. At the I.S.A.A. track and field meet, Branksome placed first in all three age divisions ahead of 10 other teams. New records were set by Aynsley Larratt-Smith in the 80m. hurdles, Missy Mahoney in 100m., 200 m., and 400m., Katie Hepburn in the high jump, Tammy Lennox in the long jump, and Sarah Goring in shot put. The team included more than 60 girls. Each girl showed commitment and a determination to improve and to try her best. Congratulations!

The team lost its first game by a narrow margin but went on to win the remaining five games. The players brought talent and enthusiasm to all games and practices and their skills improved with every outing. The success of this team combined with that of the under thirteens and the senior school teams earned Brank-some and Independent School Championship for softball. We're all looking forward to keeping the cup for many years to come.

This was my first year coaching a softball team and it was a memorable experience. The team members were enthusiastic, knowledgeable about the game, talented, and above all good sports. After only two weeks of practice we plunged into games with other schools where we met with stiff competition. We made a respectable showing and had a lot of fun in the process. Thanks, girls, for a wonderful season.

The second round of cooking club members comprised grade four and five students. The particular group was fabulous: good cooks, excellent tidy-uppers and outstanding eaters. We were most honoured to have a celebrity cook, Mrs. Chui, who treated us to a wonderful Chinese meal for our final session. Our club was enhanced by the devoted help of Patty Warren, senior school student. Thanks to all from Mrs. Clare and Mrs. Stulberg.

CROSS-COUNTRY

It was a fabulous season for the cross-country team. The Branksome teams won all of their races, including the York Montessori Guild Cup and the I.S.A.A.G. championship. We were outrun by a few elite runners from Appleby in the finals but the Branksome team had the most runners in the top ten positions. The team's success was a result of the dedication, commitment and hard work of its members. I am very proud of these girls, each runner improved over the season and I hope their interest in running remains a part of their life.

SPORTS CAPTAIN

When I review what has happened so far this year, and look ahead as to what might happen, I am proud of all Branksome's athletes and energetic contributors. The year's activities started with teams such as basketball, swimming, soccer, and cross-country, along with other athletic clubs. The teammates in each sport had great fun participating in competitive and recreational games. The cross-country team won many cups and plaques and the swim team came very close to winning the Bishop's Cup. The basketball and soccer teams both played very well, with spirit and enthusiasm. The grade seven and eight students were also given a chance to experiment with a new sport, field hockey, thanks to their coach, Miss Barron.

In the winter term, badminton and volleyball teams competed against other independent schools. The girls on these teams learned new skills and improved with each early morning practice. There was also a synchro club for those interested.

Ahead, in the spring term, we are looking forward to tennis, softball, and track and field teams. These teams have consistently done well, both in playing and team cooperation. This year, a gymnastics club was formed for the younger girls and an aerobics club ran throughout the year.

Every eight days, Miss Crawford and I, along with other grade eight students, organize primary games for grades 1-3. Miss Brough and I, along with the chieftains, try to have clan games every few weeks.

I would like to thank Miss Brough and Miss Crawford for helping the chieftains and me. I would also like to thank the chieftains for organizing games, contests, gathering and special events for their clans.

This has been a fabulous and exciting year. Thank you, Junior School for your spirit and energy. And thanks for making my last year this side of the road the best!

Missy Mahoney

SLOGAN REPS

Dear Junior School,

We'd like to thank you guys for all your hard work. The photos you submitted were National Geographic and Vogue material. The stories, poems, and other miscellaneous forms of literature were the equal of Charles Dickens or V.C. Andrews, if you prefer. The sketches, paintings and other artistic submissions were spectacular, similar to those of Paul Cezanne or Sheila McGraw.

We had an amazing year. Difficult though it may have been, we got through it alive.

We couldn't have done it, however, without our faithful, trusted companion. No, it's not Lassie, and it's not that ever popular invention, the telephone. Surprise, surprise, it's your friend and mine, the talented computer wiz, Mrs. Hockin. We never could have done it without her. So we would like to send out a special thank you to this wonderful woman who aided us in our quest to complete your Slogan. Thanx everybody.

Luv Ya!

SPRING 92

WIND IN THE WILLOWS

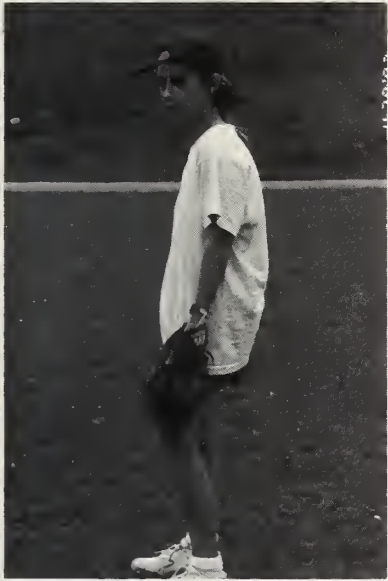

A MIDSUMMER'S NIGHT DREAM

CLOWNS

On August 26, 1992, near Meaford, Ontario, Wendy Wren Rosch, her husband Phil and their infant son Joey were killed in a car accident.

Wendy had taught Grades 3 and 4 at Branksome for nine years. She had a Master's degree in Theatre Arts, and musical theatre was her hallmark. A graduate of The Bishop Strachan School, a long-time camper and staffer at Glen Bernard Camp, and the creator of the Granite Club's Review, Wendy had energy, humour, optimism and joy which touched a great many. As a classroom teacher, she embodied in rare combination insight into the needs of her students and the pragmatism and skill to create lessons which met those needs. She was persistent, fair and bright. She taught life.

Phil and Wendy met at Branksome. Phil also was a member of our staff for several years and at the time of his death had been completing the construction of their home near Meaford. He was pursuing his dream of building boats. An imaginative, proud and talented man who clearly adored his wife and sons, he will be sadly missed.

Joey was only eight weeks old at the time of his death. He brought much joy to his parents and brother Charlie with whom he was to have attended our Staff Day Care this Fall. Charlie is now living with Wendy's sister in the United States.

Thirsty in the Rain, There's an eagle and it keeps on flying over mountains cupped with white snow in green valleys, lonesome people trying so hard ... to tell each other what they think they know with greedy hands they take each others money just to buy back each others pain in this land of flowing milk and honey they wander thirsty in the rain like that eagle now my soul is flying over mountains, through crimson morning sky and there don't seem to be no use in struggling so hard there don't seem to be no reason why I must fight you for the rich man's money I can't buy back his helpless pain he seems so useless and somehow funny to be thirsty in all this rain and fair thee well now, my own true lover my face you never will see here no more but there is one promise that is given I'll meet you on that shining golden shore golden shore, love, where the eagles soar so high above the fruitful plains I'm the same friend that you knew when we wandered, thirsty in the rain.

MCLEOD

Music is really alive and great at Branksome. This year I have really enjoyed participating in the choirs and the wind ensemble. Life in residence has been terrific with new friends, the best housemothers ever and a pretty neat roomie. (Thanks Viv) Next year I plan to continue studying music or environmental science in university.

The body is the cage of the human spirit.
You can see it shimmering behind the jewels we call eyes
As it tries to escape through their transparent depth.
You note its cries for freedom by the shape of the lips,
the thrust of the tongue, and the breath of the sigh.
You follow its grace along the curve of the neck and see its strength in the width of proud shoulders.
But you hear its message through the motion of the hand.
For hands cannot lie, they tell a man's labor and a woman's age
And when you give a hand a pen, the spirit is set free to dance on white paper,
Releasing the innermost thoughts of these fine poets.

The EAGLE FLIES FREE

"How could this be?" I asked myself. "How could I have let this happen, why was I so stupid?! I should have known." My thoughts were broken by the deep voice of Foster. "What the hell are you doing out here?"

I decided to lie. "Marve said I could come out and get some air."

"The hell he did. He's been with me the whole time!" Foster's black eyes penetrated my head; the stare was deadly. Suddenly I felt a sharp kick hit my shin, then another, and another until I was on the floor. The agony filled me. Another foot landed on my back. I cried out. Seeing that I was in pain Foster stopped. "Come on bitch!" He grabbed a tuft of hair and dragged me to my cell.

I don't know how long I sat in the damp dark room. Marve visited me twice with water and fruit. Night must have come because the house went silent.

I didn't sleep much that night. I kept on seeing my capture over and over again in my head. Why didn't anyone see or hear me? Someone must have! I could feel the sweaty hand of Foster over my mouth, the knife in my back and the tight grip of Marve. I wanted to cry out! The room seemed to be closing in on me. I couldn't breathe. Finally, I passed out.

Fall passed quickly and before too long winter arrived. The trees glistened and the ground was a smooth layer of fluffy snow. Marve and Foster let me go out once. Of course, they came along but it didn't matter. The crisp air bit at my cheeks and the snow crunched under my feet. I longed to stay out forever but I was inside in no time and eventually back into my cell. I heard Christmas music being played on the radio but Marve and Foster just ignored it. By that time I had lost count of the days.

I had learned the art of silence. The months of kicks, slaps, and whips had made me go mute. I think it bothered Marve and Foster. They wanted me to feel pain but all I felt was trapped and lonely. I guess they started to get bored with me because the beatings got worse; as well as that they started watching me all the time. Sleeping, eating, and eventually, undressing. The first time they raped me I cried silently. After that, I shut myself off from the rest of the world.

Finally spring arrived. I could smell it, hear it and then see it! I had not been outside since the raping had started. I stood outside for a few minutes feeling nothing. Marve and Foster were behind me, each with a gun. I looked around me. Still nothing. I was numb. Could I ever feel anything again. I looked up into the clean blue sky. I began to follow an eagle with my eyes. Its swift, strong movements engulfed the sky. Its wings glided softly. It was beautiful! It was free! I felt a lump in my throat. Free! My heart started to beat loudly. Could they hear it? I turned around to check. Their faces were just flat slates with nothing written on them. I looked around at the forest, the river, the house! My breathing became harder as I saw the eagle soar above me. Free! Suddenly, I ran. I had never run so fast before in my life. I knew Marve and Foster were behind me. Close behind me! It didn't matter though. The few seconds of freedom were better than anything else in the world. I was free!

WHY

In Loving Memory
In all things sacred I found hiding
The gentile eccentricities of the fourth grade.
The sweet and sour memories
Of blue snow, jelly shoes
And unicorns.

I found Her sitting on
The Hill
With some gum and a boy-
In the palm of her hand.
He was dared to kiss
Her, and she dared
To kiss back.
She was the traffic light
Of our energies.
She said wrong things at
Wrong times.
Words flying like
Regulation thumbtacks that stuck
You;
T'll recess, until you were on
Her team.
Wars were waged for the color of
Her eyes,
Her hair,
Her shoes, but the bitterness was Always lost
At the bottom of a slurpee.
7-11 peace talks
Blue tiles, a shaving cream cake,
Baby turtles and porridge
Quickly sinking into the sands of Memory.

1975-1986

Why, mommy, why do the men parade
And we sit here, and silent?
Why, mommy, why do the men who march
Have expressions cold and violent?

Hush, baby, hush, lower your voice
We must not speak so loud
For the lives we lead, and who we are
We must no more be proud

Why, mommy, why did daddy leave and are we here all alone?
Why, mommy, why can we not flee
From this imprisoning home?

Hush, baby, hush, don't ask so much
What is, is what will be
Now close your eyes, as I hold you close
Forever next to me

Why, mommy, why do people shout
and pound upon the door?
Why, mommy, why do you now cry
Not strong like you were before?

Hush, baby, hush, and remember me
When I am far away
I will never forget your smiling face
In my heart you'll forever stay.

Why, mommy, why is he grabbing you
And why is this man holding me?
Why the red bands on their arms?
Why won't they let us be?

Hush, baby, hush, and don't you cry
Wipe those salty tears from your face
For you and I will meet again
Some other time and place

Why, mommy, why is he pushing you
Through our secret door?
But he took her away to the deathly camp
And she answered my questions no more.

L'ECLIPSE LUNAIRE

Un moment dans le temps.
On clignote
Et cela a disparu:
L'obscurité.
Silence
Solitude
Une pause.
Chut!
La paix couvre le monde
Comme une couverture;
On fait un souhait
Et,
Puis,
Graduellement elle retourne,
La lumière.
Le monde commence encore.

Robyn Thompson

L'ARBRE

Ça commence avec de petits bourgeons.
Puis, ils grandissent et grandissent.
Les bourgeons sont florissants,
Et ils sont des feuilles.
Verte et forte: elles forment
Un baldaquin en haut de ma tête.
On peut se cacher dessous et
On peut jouer "maison" dans notre fort.

Brun, rouge, orange, jaune.
Les feuilles tombent.
Elles sont sèches et faibles.
Elles sont autour de nous.
On peut jouer dedans et se cacher dessous.
On les met dans les sacs.
Ils vont dans le camion d'ordures.
C'est fini.
Elles sont mortes.

To All My Friends

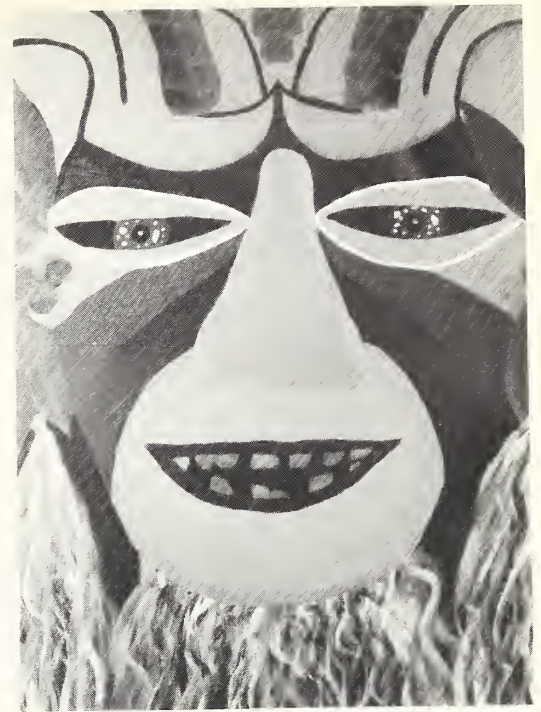

A memory
Nothing but a sweet memory
Solid in my mind
but not tangible to reality
The stark empty reality of all those years that I won't share with you and absence makes the heart grow dusty and the mind void
I know to forget you would be murder in my eyes it would kill a part of my own self
Till we meet again
We will meet again
and I won't ever forget you
I can't.

in words?
If only I could paint.

Man's Injustice

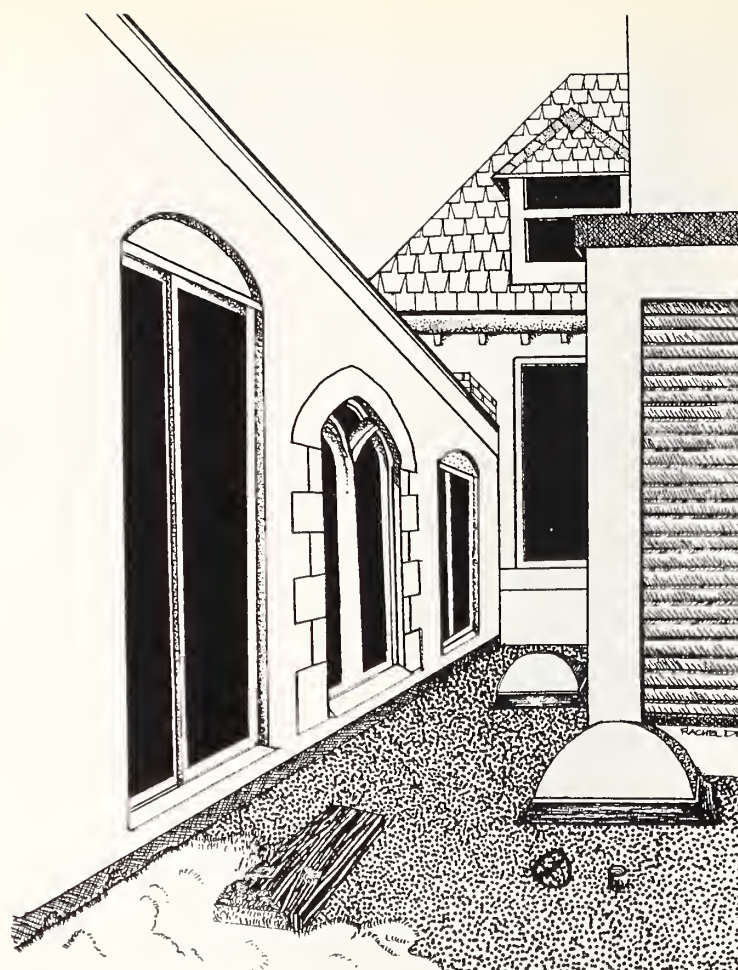

Mammals are plunging into the blue sea
Animals are rushing 'cross barren lands
Hunted in fear for they can't be set free
Learning not to trust the two-legged man

Fighting, and needing to live with their own
Only to know the inside of a cage
Ferociously caught because they're well known
Trapped behind bars that contain all their rage

Kicked and whipped, and denied of all freedom
Under crimson skies, sought for their pale skins
Left to die alone with their feelings numb
Betrayed, abused by man's cruelty and sins

Where are the animals that roam the earth
Change has to come if we want a rebirth.

HANDS

I see young hands clasped in sisterhood and motherhood being pulled apart. I see hands clasped in love and joy being wrenched away, with disgust, "how could you", deviation in their voices. I see hands of two colours, once touched and cared for, exulted for their differences, pushing each other away, "stick with your own kind". I see young hands, needing, hoping, reaching for older hands, "some other time", they are crushed away. I see a hand with only four fingers reaching out but reaching nothing while hands in white gloves examine, cold and brusque, test tube rattle, "DNA recombination to eradicate this by next year", the hands are efficient, the other hand is a line. I see old and wrinkled hands, resigned sitting quietly while other hands pass by unwilling to slow to the pace of arthritis, the wrinkled hand is lonely. I see smooth, creamed, bejewelled hands, recoiling, revulsed, from darkened work-worn hands. Lazy, eating up my hard earned money, they skirt around, gloved.

I see hands kept apart, never reaching for each other, never seeing beyond their prejudice. I see young hands growing up kept apart, by societies' fears and greed, never knowing.

I see two hands reaching for each other, never touching, drifting further and further apart. And further.

RUSHING DESIRES

Rushing through a field at the darkness of the hours,
Running, by a net full of memories
Clasping to the sky full of bright wishes
Dancing around, to be as free as the air amongst your clothes and hair.
Drowning within the high stalks of corn, sunflowers, and new blossoms growing into the world.

Desires like chocolate covered strawberries
touch your tender lips
and the bareness of no clothes
to touch your boney hips.
Flowers of the night, whispers,
screams, and colourful means.
It's like they say once a dream has been told
it won't ever come alive.
Rushing through a field at night.

By Annie Veale

Les Tournsols

They turn their golden head toward the light
brilliant, vibrant
basking in the early morning sunshine.
Slender necks strain
to catch every last drop.
Sun lovers, bonnets of spun gold
Quivering with pleasure,
fields of joy,
Les Tournsols.

By Melanie Walker

We are only objects in these poets' minds
A thing of beauty, only to be possessed.
They think that they are being kind,
But it leaves me quite depressed.
We've been compared to a summer day
Our teeth as white as pearls,
Sweeter than the flowers of May
Our shiny hair with curls.
Do they think we'll fall for this?
They must think that we are dumb
Just to get that one short kiss
And to have us under their thumb.

A bit of advice for our poet friends.
Your lines only lead you to dead ends.

A true wish comes once in a lifetime;
it's that wish that goes out with the birthday cake candles, the wish that drowns with the penny in the fountain at the mall, the one that gets lost with a good-luck charm in the move.
Or maybe it's gone because you knew it would never happen.

The Blind Date

Tall, dark and handsome. A cross between Christian Slater and Brad Pitt. This is what they told me. It is what I pictured. We would sit at a restaurant by the sea, smelling the fresh scents of gourmet cooking. The only thing I would see would be the image of the candle flame, the only object between us, reflecting off his large, blue, watery eyes, our feet and fingers interlaced. His kiss would send me shooting off into heaven, with fireworks exploding around us, and I would come back down, landing in Fantasia, a land where every dream and fantasy came true. I sat there, staring down at the the styrofoam cartons and crumpled-up pieces of wax paper, reading 'Cheese Burger' over and over again. I dared not look up at his black, beady eyes. He was more like a cross between the blob and my little brother. The place was filled with the odour of greasy food - and thank goodness, unlike him, I did not forget my wallet. My fingers were not interlaced with his, but were twitching with anger, and his, with nervousness. How could they do this to me? There was no good night kiss, but just a quick "Good night," and the thought: "I never want to see you again."

KEEPING UP WITH THE JONES

The Jones considered themselves to be moderately hip people. They could discuss fascism, eat raddichio with goat cheese and occasionally recycle. They had been to foreign films, and had an espresso machine that could do four different kinds of cappuccino - with or without froth. They firmly believed that styrofoam was evil and ran their BMW on unleaded gas. Much to their eternal shame, their neighbours had no house plants.

When the Jones invited us over for lunch, they were eager for us to observe their new patio furniture. We observed. And extolled its fine wicker durability. The Jones were boycotting plastic.

Mrs. Jones had gone to considerable pains to prepare tuna fish and raisin canapes. Her efforts were laid out on a plexiglass tray, looking back at us. We observed. So did they. We sat down and told Mrs. Jones how practical wicker must be. We hoped it was practical. It didn't have anything else going for it. From our vantage point, we could see the composter, conspicuously hidden behind the bouganvillea.

It was springtime when we visited the Jones. The clouds sagged on the horizon like ripe squash. The breeze aspired to Gulf Stream, but was definitely Shinook. Like Mrs. Jones, it was trying to be something it wasn't. In Mrs. Jones' case, this was Julia Child. The flat things on the plate were tuna fish canapes a la king. Stephen King, that is.

We chewed. And wished we didn't have to.

The Jones had recently acquired a dog. From where - we were never told, but our suspicions ranged from the pound to the nether regions of Hell. For reasons which completely escaped us, they had decided to name it Moses. Not that the Jones were particularly religious. They went to church for weddings, and donated a small percentage of their earnings to the Reverend Johnson - mainly for the tax returns - but Mr. Jones had decided that the Bible was the ideal source of nomenclature for household pets. Symbolic or not this creature was definitely familiar with the less divine aspects of the sacred book. Possibly it was the antichrist. It was currently engrossed in routing out the critter that frequented the far end of the garden.

This critter, near mythical in its ambiguity, was a constant topic of debate come spring at the Jones'.

"Our little friend at the end of the garden came back this year. We fancy he thinks we're family." Mrs. Jones clucked and sipped her carrot juice.

"Damned rodent, ate all my escarole." Mr. Jones had an ongoing vendetta against the local wildlife that threatened the well-being of his experimental gourmet lettuce. We smiled. It was just lettuce, after all.

"Rodent? Oh, darling, don't be so provincial. That's a crimson-stripped woodland wildcat. They thrived on cellulose, you know." We didn't.

"Beaver."

"Wildcat, darling"

"Beaver". Wildcats don't live in this part of the world."

"Well that's what makes it all the more extraordinary." You couldn't argue with logic like that.

The dog had moved itself back to the veranda - we wondered what our chances were of feeding it the remaining canapes. Not likely. The wind had picked up, making him even less appealing. We tried shifting upwind, smiling big as we sucked in fresh air through our teeth. The dog sized us up, figuring on eating well tonight.

"Don't worry about Moses. He wouldn't really eat the wildcat -"

"Beaver. We trained him to be a vegetarian, you see. Moses, I mean, not the beaver."

"Vegan"

"Beaver"

"No, vegan," Mrs. Jones corrected carefully. "The dog's a vegan. The beaver's a wildcat."

This did little to quell our fears. The fact that the dog was a vegan only affirmed that it hadn't eaten meat in a while. Bad news in a carnivore. We squirmed. The Jones assumed we were testing the wicker patio furniture for maximum comfort. The dog started chewing on its tail, as the first dollops of rain spit on the canapes. Thankfully, this was the sign to move inside...

BRANKSOME

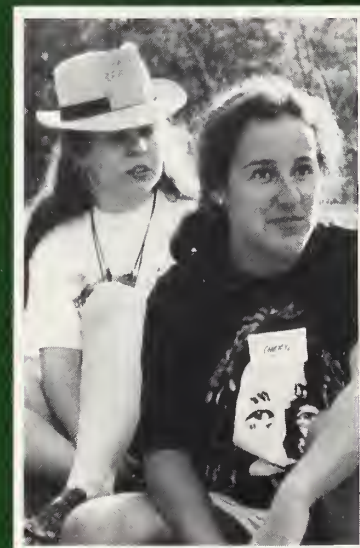

The Branksome Green Project was established in the fall of 1990 with 2 principle aims: * to rehabilitate, repair and improve the school grounds, with special attention to the Carolinian woodlot
* to make the grounds more accessible and useful as an educational tool.

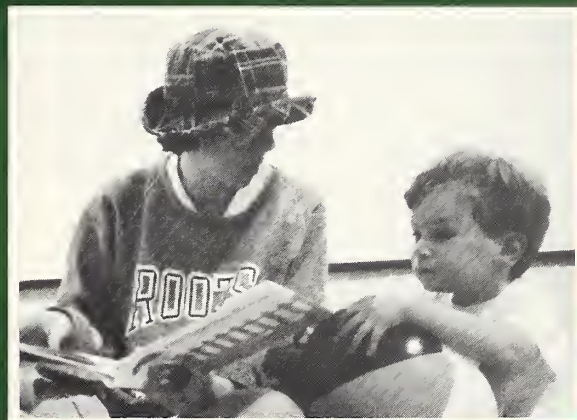

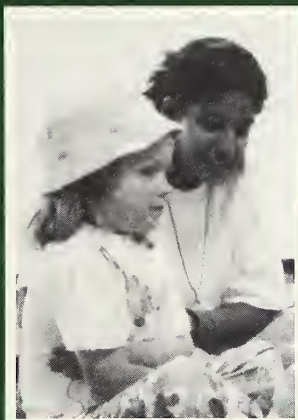

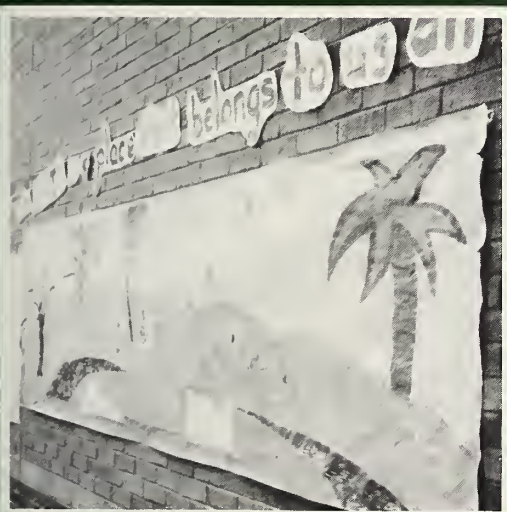

To further these aims, a variety of activities have been planned or are under way:

- 1) an inventory of plants and animals found on the grounds was begun in November, 1990;
- 2) restoration of the ravine bank woodlot on the west campus as a remnant of Carolinian forest was begun with assistance from the Shell Environmental Fund, in the Spring of 1991;
- 3) restorative planting on the east campus has been started;
- 4) research on the historical uses of the land is under way;
- 5) construction of the first part of a nature trail through the woodlot was carried out in November, 1991, with the assistance of the Environmental Partners Fund;
- 6) establishment of a native arboretum has started;
- 7) an overall examination of grounds maintenance practice including soil amelioration, tree pruning, chemical use and summer watering is being undertaken;

Further plans include an extension of the Nature Trail a short distance on the opposite side of the steps to the lower field, and the building of a simple, amphitheater-style teaching/performance space in a natural bowl in the hillside there.

ARTS PREFECT

The Arts of 1992-93

Informing the students of Branksome about what is going on within the Arts departments this year, has been spectacular. Branksome has a great number of talented people and they are being recognized more and more.

The Music, Drama, Visual Art and Fashion Art departments all joined forces and gave us a demonstration of their talents in the three night extravaganza PIZZAZZ '92 in November. Reviews were high and justifiable. The singing was beautiful, the dancing entertaining, the painting for the set was inspiring, the costumes were out of this world and the acting spectacular. Plaid tidings also took place in November and the girls of the Art classes put their work on display and our Gym was full of arts and crafts in all shapes and sizes.

Branksome parents, relatives and friends received a great taste of things to come when the whole school put on an array of Christmas and Holiday songs in our annual Carol service. The singing, as usual, impressed and entertained.

It wasn't long until we had our Winter concert. That too was a smashing success.

The concert also involved the Junior school and they enjoyed themselves as much as we enjoyed their playing.

The Drama department put on a great performance of ARSENIC AND OLD LACE in March which was witty and stunning performances were given by all actors. The Junior school put on the musical this year PIRATES OF PENZANCE and played with zeal and excitement. May was also our second Arts appreciation month.

April was the music departments' big month thinking back memories spring from the depths of pre exam stress. The trip to Boston, I.S.M.F. and the Wind Ensemble playing at the Sky dome. A satisfying month for us all.

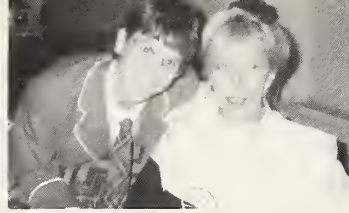

The Fine Arts of Branksome Hall is a huge part of our community and because we've had such an excellent year I'd like to thank all of those who contributed, from reading our paper Muses News to performing in our numerous presentations.

And a great thank-you to our staff who have been amazing and an inspiration to us all.

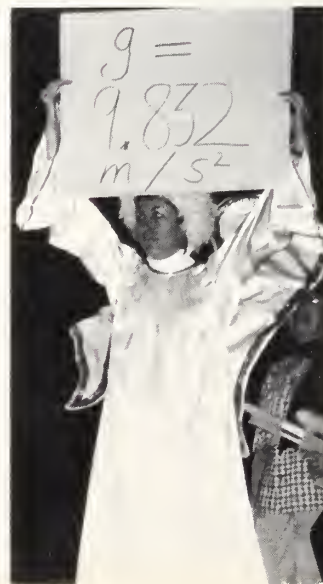

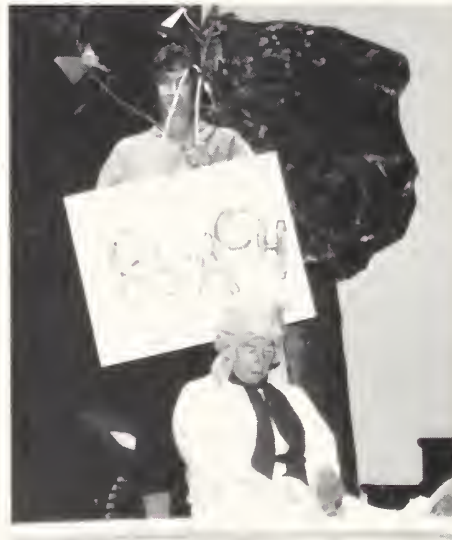

Thanks Branksome for a fine Arts year.

I said our spirit's hot,
I said our teams are tops,
I said I think I like to think about what other schools are not.

Throughout the year, Branksome's enthusiasm and dedication has shone through in many colours. Black stands for the determination of the Branksome athlete. Red shines bright on our faces, as a symbol of achievement. Green marks the other team's envy of our athlete's extraordinary talent, and the colour white represents every Branksomite's honest sportsmanship.

A special tribute must be made to the coaches. Their patience is endless and their commitment was marked with success. Without them, Branksome would not have the outstanding reputation that it does today.

I'd like to leave you with one final idea to consider:
(a Nike/Anne original)

THANKS

Special thanks to Murphy's Potato Chips who, for the second year running, provided the Branksome Hall Rowing Team with CAPE COD and MURPHY'S chips, for a most successful fundraising drive. In 1992 the wholesale value of the Murphy's donation was $8,000, and this year it amounted to $12,000.

Branksome Rowing depends largely on individual and corporate donations to maintain its program; Murphy's generosity has provided a real boost both to the coffers and to the spirit of the team.

Sometimes we are scared
Scared of what we might not be able to do
Scared of what people might think if we tried
Why?

After all, there's really no time to be afraid
So stop.

Try something you've never tried

Enter a triathlon

Row your first regatta

Try that jump serve in volleyball

Join the squash club

Buy a pogostick

Become a goalie

Triple jump and defy gravity

Try bobsledding

Try anything

You have nothing to lose,

And everything, everything,

Everything to gain.

Congratulations Branksome on a successful and exciting year of sports. Good luck next year and may the joy of sport remain strong in your heart.

A Typical Day In Study

When Ainslie girls hear the bell, they anxiously run to study with smiles on their faces. They open their books with their brains yearning for knowledge NOT!!! At the front sits the warden with her beady little eyes, scanning the room for trouble. In the first desk to the left sits Christina doodling in her day book and writing notes. Behind her sits Lyndsey asking Christina if she has caught up on the latest gossip while trying to convince the warden that gossip is a form of science. In the next desk, Rosalind concentrates on her history. Sometimes her mad scribbles send her into La La Land. Little Bertila, while trying to see over the top of her desk, eagerly prepares for her next intellectual conversation with the older human species. At the back, sits Sharon looking over her latest Math tests with tears streaming down her face because of the hideous mark of 99.9%. Half an hour late, music loving Winnie stumbles into study anxious to catch up on some zzz's while listening to her walkman. Meanwhile, on the other side of the room, Janis quietly reads magazines about the male species with her feet comfortably propped on top of the desk. In the desk to the south of Janis, Marianna enthusiastically studies the English language frustrated to the point where her hair stands on end. Every now and then, Debbie turns around to yell at Marianna to be quiet and do her work. Then the bell rings for dinner. There is a sigh of relief as everyone runs over the warden trying to be the first out the door.

Study Hall was hilarious, thanks for a great year!

Debbie & Bertila

Grade 12

Famous for:

Amanda - threatening to have a heart attack while listening to Bruce Springsteen if interrupted.
 Eva - waking up Amanda at 5:30 in the morning to walk her to Vence's room because of her fear of ghosts.
 Vence - falling asleep in study with a book on her head thinking all the information will sink in.
 Sarah - eating three chocolate cakes in a day and not gaining a pound.
 Donna - being the silent observer.
 Karen - asking "Mabel, do you want to go to MacNeill?"
 Mabel - replying "Yeah, why not?!"
 Vera - covering her room with mothballs to ward off fumes from Amanda's feet!
 Julie-Anne - being caught in someone else's room after curfew.
 Yolanda - saying "My Mommy loves me. She does. She really does. (YES-I!)"
 Renata - sleeping through the fire alarm.
 Charmaine - putting her mouth on "Fast Forward" when she's stressed out!
 Miss Balfour - catching people when they're doing what they're not supposed to be doing.
 Miss Nixon - knowing the Residence handbook like the palm of her hand.

Thanks for an IRIE (GOOD) year!

Mrs. Lumsdon

Carolyn Dempster
Head of Residence

As I sit at my desk, I am recalling many happy memories of events during this past school year. We visited many places (too numerous to name) for example, Canada's Wonderland, Niagara Falls, "The Secret Garden" at the Royal Alexandra Theatre, Big City Improv, The Royal Ontario Museum, The Planetarium and "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dream Coat" at the Elgin Theatre.

Theme dinners such as: "Pyjama Night", Chinese New Year, Thanksgiving, Hallowe'en, Christmas, Valentine's Day and Easter are always so much fun. This year we also had International Evenings.

We are always happy to have day girls join us for either our "Day-Girl Boarder Exchange" or for our "Bed and Breakfast" programme.

The Residence Council has led the Residence in a most positive direction. The council is under the capable leadership of Carolyn Dempster and Danielle Paterson. Manju Chandramani and Haedi-Kaye Holmes provided good leadership for MacNeil House as did Nicole School and Bhavna Chandramani for Buccleuch House and Julie-Anne Smith, Sarah Grant, Debbie Patton and Bertila Ho for Ainslie House. Many thanks to all of you.

Life in Residence may be described as an extended family where we care, share, rejoice in each other's accomplishments and support each another in times of grief or sadness.

Of my five years at Branksome 1992/93 has been especially fun. I've been able to get to know a lot of girls from other houses and see the effort that goes into running boarding. When you live at school you lead a different life. Since you are away from your home, friends and housemothers become your surrogate family. You share a lot -- not just bedrooms, bathrooms and kitchens but excitement, sadness and happiness. It is always easy to find support and advice about anything and you are never lacking in stimuli. There are always friends to visit (handy because they live beside you) and it is hard to get lonely with over 20 other girls living in the same house.

There are some memories of B.H. residence that everyone can recall: study sessions (academically, it is beneficial to be in residence because you can always find someone's old notes and fellow classmates are around to tutor you); midnight chats (these can be similar to group therapy or may be just because you are too tired to return to

Life in Residence is a group of friends "making memories after memories!" We are an unique global community where there are many interesting representatives from various countries who show us their customs and traditions. These girls are from Abu Dhabi (United Arab Emirates), Argentina, Bahamas, Barbados, Canada, Dominica, Hong Kong, India, Jamaica, Japan, Korea, Mexico, Montserrat, Nevis, St. Croix, St. Kitts, St. Lucia, Singapore, Spain, Taiwan, Trinidad and Tobago, Turks and Caicos, United States of America and Yemen.

There are many components which make a Residence run smoothly: The students along with the Residence Dons, Mrs. Lumsdon, the Health Centre, the Administrative Staff, the Kitchen Staff, the Housekeeping Staff and the Maintenance Staff.

I thank you all for yet another good year.

To the graduating year, may I extend my very best wishes and hope that your future years bring you happiness and success.

To you all, have a good and safe summer holiday.

Keep well the road!

your own room); nighttime tobogganing (sleds compliments of the kitchen), Wednesdays in the T.V. room (90210 then Melrose Place) and of course endless phone lines (friends calling in get frustrated and boarders are trained to be patient).

I owe a lot of thanks to Manju, Haedi-Kaye, Julie-Anne, Sarah, Nicole, Bhavna, Debbie, Bert, Dan and of course to each of the housemoms, to Mrs. Lumsdon and to Miss Northgrave. They are the Residence Council and it was their positive thinking, innovative ideas and willingness to help that made this year extra fun. But to ALL the boarders, you are what make up the residence and you are what makes it so good. I will really miss everyone next year. It will be weird not to have the comfort of familiar faces surrounding me but it is nice to know that I have made friends who will last a lifetime (and I will have a lot of exotic places to visit!).
